The Issuer is not obliged to gross up any payments in respect of the Securities and all amounts payable in respect of the Securities shall be made with such deduction or withholding of taxes, duties or governmental charges of any nature whatsoever imposed, levied or collected by the way of deduction or withholding, if such deduction or withholding is required by law.

No person has been authorised to give any information or make any representation not contained in or not consistent with these Final Terms, or any other information supplied in connection with the Securities and, if given or made, such information or representation must not be relied upon as having been authorised by the Issuer or Deutsche Bank AG, Hong Kong Branch acting as dealer of the Securities (the "Dealer").

It is also capable of assuming, and assumes, the risks of the investment in the Securities.*

(c) Status of Parties: Neither the Issuer nor the Dealer is acting as a fiduciary for or adviser to it in respect of the investment in the Securities.

ADDITIONAL RISK FACTORS

Since the Note is denominated in a currency different to the currency of the country where the investor is based, exchange rate fluctuations may have a negative effect on the return of the Note.

The Securities are denominated in Chinese Renminbi ("CNY" or "RMB"). The Securities contain particular risks for potential investors, including the risks below.

The RMB is not freely convertible; there are significant restrictions on the remittance of RMB into and outside the PRC.

Exposure to offshore RMB denominated assets can entail greater risks than exposure to well developed markets, including potentially significant legal, economic and political risks. The offshore RMB market is in transformation and therefore exposed to the risk of swift political change and economic downturn. Political or economic instability may affect investor confidence, which could in turn have a negative impact on the prices of emerging market exchange rates, securities or other assets. The prices of offshore RMB exchange rates, offshore RMB denominated securities or other assets can be volatile in case of political or economic instability. Movements in such prices are influenced by, among other things, interest rates, changing market supply and demand, external market forces (particularly in relation to major trading partners), trade, fiscal, monetary programmes, policies of governments, and international political and economic events and policies.

In the offshore RMB market, the development of securities markets is at an early stage. This could lead to risks and practises (such as increased volatility) that are not common in more developed securities markets, which may negatively affect the value of securities listed on the exchanges. In addition, markets are characterised by illiquidity in the form of a low turnover of some of the listed securities.

It is important to note that, during times of global economic slowdown, offshore RMB exchange rates, offshore RMB denominated securities and other assets are more likely than other forms of investment with lower risks to be sold during any "flight to quality", and their value may decrease accordingly.

For further details on the risks related to an investment in the Securities, please see Schedule B hereto.

ADDITIONAL RISK FACTORS

RMB denominated Securities

RMB is not freely convertible; there are significant restrictions on remittance of RMB into and outside the People's Republic of China (the "PRC")

RMB is not freely convertible at present. The PRC government continues to regulate conversion between RMB and foreign currencies despite the significant reduction over the years by the PRC government of control over routine foreign exchange transactions under current account. Participating banks in Hong Kong have been permitted to engage in the settlement of RMB trade transactions under a pilot scheme introduced in July 2009. This represents a current account activity. The pilot scheme was extended in June 2010 to cover twenty provinces and cities in the PRC and to make RMB trade and other current account item settlement available in all countries worldwide.

Subject to limited exceptions, there is currently no specific PRC regulation on the remittance of RMB into the PRC for settlement of capital account items. Investors outside the PRC may only remit offshore RMB into the PRC for capital account purposes such as shareholders' loan or capital contribution upon obtaining specific approvals from the relevant authorities on a case by case basis.

There is no assurance that the PRC government will continue to gradually liberalise the control over cross-border RMB remittances in the future, that the pilot scheme introduced in July 2009 will not be discontinued or that new PRC regulations will not be promulgated in the future which have the effect of restricting or eliminating the remittance of RMB into or outside the PRC.

There is only limited availability of RMB outside the PRC, which may affect the liquidity of the Securities and the Issuer's ability to source RMB outside the PRC to service the Securities.

As a result of the restrictions by the PRC government on cross-border RMB fund flows, the availability of RMB outside the PRC is limited. Since February 2004, in accordance with arrangements between the PRC government and the Hong Kong government, licensed banks in Hong Kong may offer limited RMB-denominated banking services to Hong Kong residents and specified business customers. The People's Bank of China (the "PBOC") has also established an RMB clearing and settlement system for participating banks in Hong Kong. On 19 July 2010, further amendments were made to the Settlement Agreement on the Clearing of RMB Business (the "Settlement Agreement") between the PBOC and Bank of China (Hong Kong) Limited (the "RMB Clearing Bank") to further expand the scope of RMB business for participating banks in Hong Kong. Pursuant to the revised arrangements, all corporations are allowed to open RMB accounts in Hong Kong, there is no longer any limit (other than as provided in the following paragraph) on the ability of corporations to convert RMB and there will no longer be any restriction on the transfer of RMB funds between different accounts in Hong Kong.

However, the current size of RMB-denominated financial assets outside the PRC is limited. As of 31 January 2011, the total amount of RMB deposits held by institutions authorised to engage in RMB banking business in Hong Kong amounted to approximately RMB 370.6 billion. In addition, participating banks are also required by the Hong Kong Monetary Authority ("HKMA") to maintain a total amount of RMB (in the form of cash and its settlement account balance with the RMB Clearing Bank) of no less than 25 per cent. of their RMB deposits, which further limits the availability of RMB that participating banks can utilise for conversion services for their customers. RMB business participating banks do not have direct RMB liquidity support from PBOC. The RMB Clearing Bank only has access to onshore liquidity support from PBOC to settle open positions of participating banks for limited types of transactions, including open positions resulting from conversion services for corporations relating to cross-border trade settlement and for individual customers with accounts in Hong Kong of up to RMB 20,000 per person per day. The RMB Clearing Bank is not obliged to settle for participating banks any open positions resulting from other foreign exchange transactions or conversion services and the participating banks will need to source RMB from the offshore market to settle such open positions.

Although it is expected that the offshore RMB market will continue to grow in depth and size, its growth is subject to many constraints as a result of PRC laws and regulations on foreign exchange. There is no assurance that new PRC regulations will not be promulgated or the Settlement Agreement will not be terminated or amended in the future which will have the effect of restricting availability of RMB offshore. The limited availability of RMB outside the PRC may affect the liquidity of the Securities. To the extent the Issuer is required to source RMB in the offshore market to service the Securities, there is no assurance that the Issuer will be able to source such RMB on satisfactory terms, if at all.

Securities are subject to RMB exchange rate risks

The value of the RMB against the U.S. dollar, Hong Kong dollar and other foreign currencies fluctuates and is affected by changes in the PRC and international political and economic conditions and by many other factors. In addition, although the Issuer's primary obligation is to make all payments with respect to the Securities in RMB, in the event access to RMB deliverable in Hong Kong becomes restricted to the extent that, by reason of Inconvertibility, Non-transferability or Illiquidity (each as defined in the Conditions), the Issuer is unable, or it is impracticable for it, to make payments in RMB in Hong Kong, the terms of the Securities allow the Issuer to make payments in U.S. dollars in New York at the prevailing spot rate of exchange, all as provided for in more detail in the Conditions. As a result, the value of these RMB payments may vary with the prevailing exchange rates in the marketplace. If the value of the RMB depreciates against the U.S. dollar, Hong Kong dollar or other foreign currencies, the value of a Securityholder's investment in U.S. dollar, Hong Kong dollar or other applicable foreign currency terms will decline.

Payments in respect of the RMB denominated Securities

All payments to investors in respect of the RMB denominated Securities will be made solely (i) for so long as the RMB denominated Securities are represented by a Global Security, by transfer to a Renminbi bank account maintained in Hong Kong in accordance with prevailing CMU rules and procedures, or (ii) for so long as the RMB denominated Securities are in definitive form, by transfer to a Renminbi bank account maintained in Hong Kong in accordance with prevailing rules and regulations. The Issuer cannot be required to make payment by any other means (including in any other currency or by transfer to a bank account in the PRC)."

Securities which are linked to underlying Investments denominated in RMB Issued outside the PRC

If the Securities are linked to underlying investments denominated in RMB outside the PRC, investors should note that at present the choice of such underlying investments is limited. Further, such underlying investments may not have an active secondary market and the price of such underlying investments may have large bid/offer spreads. The resale value of the Securities may be adversely affected and investors may suffer a significant loss as a result.
